

Consistency in Recording Health Information

Being consistent in recording health information is important in gaining maximum benefit when using an electronic health record. Using the same terminology in recording clinical problems, plus the use of coded diagnoses is essential when using reminder/recall systems, generating patient registers for specific conditions and evaluating clinical outcomes and processes.